

Shingle Roofs Now One of Most Serious Fire Hazards Here, Chief's Records Show

Local Firemen Answer 50 Calls Since Jan. 1 To Fight Flames Resulting from Roofs Becoming Ignited; Careless Furnace Operation Given as One of Causes

Wooden shingles, for many years almost universally used for roofs, have now become one of the most serious fire hazards with which fire officials have to contend. Figures taken from the records of Fire Chief T. J. McFarland show that since the first of the year the local departments have responded to 50 alarms to extinguish fires caused by shingle roofs becoming ignited.

The loss in these fires, according to the chief's records, was $5,000. Approximately $1,000 of the amount resulted from two fires, one at the house occupied by Lee Fellers, 181 Columbia st., and the other house occupied by T. P. Baker, Delaware st.

While the total loss for the year is not great, considering the number of fires, the outstanding feature, it is pointed out by the chief, is that each shingle roof, which has already been afire, is a hazard and is in constant danger, especially through the cooler months, of becoming a starting point for a serious blaze.

It is a common belief among firemen that after they have responded to a second call to extinguish a fire on some particular shingle roof, a further fire which they say will come or later fire, will destroy the roof entirely. Some foundation for this belief is given by the fact that in both cases, where houses were partially destroyed by fire thus far this spring, the department had responded to calls twice before. In each case, however, the blaze was discovered before the fire had gained much headway.

Careless Use of Furnaces

Responsibility for the increase in the number of roof fires is laid at the door of the furnace man. With an increase in the number of furnaces being installed each year, there has been a corresponding increase in the number of roof fires. This, it is explained by the chief, is due not to the furnace itself, but to the careless manner in which it is used as an incinerator for paper and rubbish. Particularly every roof fire to which the firemen respond is caused by burning paper, the chief said.

Instruction for the burning of paper and rubbish in the furnace is given by the chief, who says that instead of opening all of the drafts, as usually done, they should be closed as soon as the fire has started and kept closed until the paper has been consumed. With two drafts open, particles of burning paper are carried up the chimney to be deposited on the roof.

A gradual looking away from use of the shingle roof is now apparent, the chief points out, and he ventures the opinion that the next five years will, in

A large measure, see the elimination of this hazard. The city of Boyers has not had a roof fire, that is, a fire starting from wooden shingles, for two years, according to information given Chief McFarland by the fire chief of that city. A campaign to replace all shingle roofs with metal, started in that city several years ago, has practically eliminated the shingle type, the Boyers chief reports.

Hazards Vary

The style of roof plays some part in the extent to which it becomes a fire hazard, according to the chief. A steep roof is in less danger of catching fire for the reason that sparks usually fall into the roof gutter while on a flat roof, or one that is on a level with a top of a chimney, is more of a hazard.

When first applied, wooden shingles do not constitute a special dangerous hazard, but after eight or ten years of exposure to the sun and wind, they become dried and soon curled up edges provide an ideal resting place for sparks.

Some idea of the increase in the number of fires from wooden shingles can be gathered from the fact that the 50 calls answered by the department thus far this year is only 10 less than was responded to by the departments during the entire year of 1927.

Much Profit Taking Sends Stocks Down on Market

Rails Keep General Level of Prices at High Mark

Markets at a Glance
New York, May 8.—Railroad stocks, firm; industrial stocks, irregular; speculative stocks, steady; foreign bonds, steady; call money 5 1/2 per cent; grain, steady; copper, firm; oil, firm; cotton, irregular; sugar, steady; rubber, firm; pig iron, firm and foreign exchange, irregular.

International News Service Financial Editor

New York, May 8.—After reaching higher price levels in the early trading today, speculative stocks encountered a considerable volume of profit-taking and professional selling, and prices in most sections of the market were swept downward a few points from the high of the day. Banks made further gains on the call money market, and despite the influx of funds from the outside points, the call rate moved up again to 4 per cent.

As a rule, the rails were steady to take up the burden of the advance as shown as the industrial and speculative shares of either weakness or reaction, and the general level of prices was fairly well maintained. A number of the important roads held regular or special meetings of directors today preparatory to full stockholders' meetings later in the month.

Failure of the New Haven directors to take any action on a cash dividend for the common stock was a disappointment for the market and the stock sold off a few points, but New York Central, Canadian Pacific, Rock Island and other high grade dividend-paying railroad common stocks pushed upward aggressively without much relation to the irregular developments in the balance of the market.

Staggering performances of Radio, General Motors, Victor Talking, General Electric, American Can and other speculative leaders were promptly resumed at the opening of the market today, but stocks did not exhibit the vigor and buoyancy that was apparent in yesterday's session, and prices were inclined to fall off from the peaks established in the first half-hour of trading. Bull activity continued in the non-dividend specialties.

STRONG DEMAND FOR HOGS CAUSES PRICES TO DROP

Chicago, May 8.—A strong demand for hogs in the face of exceptionally light receipts elevated prices 15 to 25 cents today. There were only 13,000 hogs received against 20,000 a week ago. Top reached $10.45 early with bulk at $9.95 to $10.35.

Steers, cows and heifers also actively and 10 to 15c higher.

Lambs were slow sale at weaker prices.

Coffee Market

New York, May 8.—Steadiness marked the opening of the raw coffee futures market here today. Opening quotations ranged from unchanged to 15 cents higher. July sold at $15.00, up 10 cents; September, 14.85, up 10 cents; December, 14.85, up 10 cents; March, 14.85, up 10 cents.

Traffic Deaths in America Show Big Increase, Latest Government Report Shows

Lives Lost in 77 Cities for Year Ending April 21 Total 305 More Than Preceding Year; Toll for Country Over 25,000

Washington, May 8.—Traffic hazards on American streets continue to grow, with the indication that more deaths for the year will approach the 25,000 mark.

Latest government statistics for 77 cities made public yesterday, show that for the year ending April 21, 1924, 305 persons died as the result of automobile accidents, an increase of 305 over the preceding year. The death rate for motor accidents increased three per cent in the year and for these cities was 22.1 per 100,000 population.

A heavy increase in motor deaths for the month ending April 21, when 325 were killed, also was indicated.

Index for Country
Officials said the figures for the principal cities may be taken as indicating the trend for the entire country and that no doubt the 1924 casualty list will exceed that of 1923. This country is losing more persons by automobile deaths every three years than America lost in the World war.

In addition to the killed, thousands were injured. The economic loss has been fixed by the commerce department at several billion dollars annually, including property damage and time lost by reason of injury.

New York headed the list for the month with 87 killed, but the death rate for the year was 18.2 per 100,000 population, or under the average.

Sixty-three persons were killed in the month in Chicago, where the year's death rate was 28.5. Both Chicago and New York showed material increases over the same month the year before.

Toll in Other Cities
April deaths in other principal cities were: Detroit 20, Los Angeles 28, Philadelphia 25, Pittsburgh 13, Washington, D. C. 12, Boston 11, Cleveland 14 and Columbus 10.

Seven cities reported no deaths during the month. They are Duluth, Kansas City, Kans., Louisville, Oakland, Omaha, Tacoma and Waterbury, Conn. During the same month last year eight cities reported no deaths.

Camden, N. J., reported the highest death rate for the year 54.2 per 100,000 population while the lowest of the large cities was the 11.9 rate of Kansas City.

SPEAKER DISCUSSES PROBLEMS OF HOME

Building of "More Houses" Not Nation's Need, Rotary Club Is Told

More building of homes and less building of mere houses was offered by Edgar Bruce Jacobs, of Lima, a member of the International Lyceum Chautauque Association, as a solution for the problem of the American home, in an address before the members of the Marion Rotary club at the Hotel Harding yesterday.

A false conception of the value of money in the making of a successful home was given by the speaker as one of the chief causes for the apparent failure of the American home.

The standard of the modern mother has not changed, he said.

"The same beauty of character, the same love of the higher ideals and standards that graced the women of the past, prevail in the modern mother."

Mr. Jacobs declared the danger which threatens the American home and which may prove devastating unless practical business methods are replaced by more old-fashioned sentiment, the speaker said, is the new freedom which is being experienced by women. This freedom, he declared, they do not know how to enjoy.

The girl who smokes, who drinks and who is constantly trying to impress people with her wickedness, is the result of repression, Jacobs said, adding: "For ages women have been held down and repressed and with the coming of a new freedom, they proceed to make fools of themselves."

A change in the marriage laws that would make getting married more difficult was also suggested as a means of eliminating the problem that now faces the American home.

Trapped by her past!

"I had just started to remove my make-up when a note was handed to me. I usually paid little attention to them, but glancing at this one, the name at the bottom caught my eye, and the lights danced dizzily before me." (From "Trapped by My Past," June True Story Magazine).

RECENTLY a woman who a few years ago was a popular actress on Broadway, whose name was emblazoned in electric lights, submitted a story to True Story Magazine which created a stir even among the editors long used to reading startling and unusual stories.

It was the account of why she left the stage abruptly at the height of her career never to be seen upon the boards again.

It was a tale of dread and terror which told how each night, while she swayed her thousands to smiles or tears, her eyes, masking the agony in her soul, were seeking, always seeking, among the audience the one man in all the world who had it in his power to drag her down from the pinnacle of success to the ignominy of defeat.

Deep in her heart she knew that some day he would come, and that when he did her career would end.

And so when one night an usher delivered to her dressing-room a note from a man in the audience who was waiting for her reply, she knew that at last the time had come to settle her account with fate.

Her story appears in True Story for June under the title "Trapped by My Past." Told in her own words, with nothing hidden, nothing omitted and without excuse, into it she has put all the fire and drama that perhaps once held you spell-bound across the footlights.

It may be that when you read it you will recognize her. If so you will then know the answer to a question you have probably asked yourself many times.

for the baby?" "Promised Jim Kirby I'd bring the child home this afternoon. I got a box, with bedding and covers, in the trunk. I'll take it over and get the young fellow on the way home. By the way, did Uncle Charley say anything about where he kept his supply of liquor? I had a notion that's what he was leavin' you in his will."

Monica shook her head. "The secret died with Uncle Charley, Sheriff. It would, of course. That old duffer talked about everything else except that. Well, I'll have a chat with Bob while you're getting the baby ready. Sister hate to give him up, don't you?"

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Humorous Boyhood Adventure

By JUD MORTIMER LEWIS

TODAY was Tuesday, and it has been just like Sunday and yesterday. A lot of trees have blown down, and the house that was being built across from the schoolhouse has had the roof blown off of it.

When I had let Jubilee down by the rope in his teeth this morning and had seen my mink and was feeding my mink, I asked my grandfather what he thought of the wind blowing. He said it was a pretty good blow, but it couldn't hurt a thing. He said it was a pretty good blow, but it couldn't hurt a thing. He said it was a pretty good blow, but it couldn't hurt a thing.

Princess Receives Proof of Duplicity

At my father's dining table, Lillian Allen Drake and I rose at once from our chairs, realizing that no time was to be lost in doing the things which the letter sent from the princess.

"K. seven," had suggested.

"I'll write to Ducky, Madge," Lillian said. "For you're the only one so dear with Princess Olina. You'll have to put all your eggs on the table. I'm absolutely sure you'll be able to give the once-over to this letter, which 'K. seven' has sent for Olina's enlightenment, before Madge takes it with her."

"A bitter memory, methinks."

"Somebody told me you were in here yesterday and bought some lumber for a coffin for Uncle Charley Canfield."

The ranger poked, and described briefly Uncle Charley's last day on earth. Thurlow listened carefully and had the good sense not to ask questions out of the commonplace.

"Did the old boy have any relatives?" he inquired sympathetically.

"None that anybody ever heard of. The only person left to mourn his passing is Miss Dale, the lookout up on Bogus. He was her uncle by choice, I imagine, owing to the fact that her father and Uncle Charley had been partners for about 20 years."

"Oh, the old man was Uncle Charley to everybody who knew him. He was that sort of man. Did he leave any estate to speak of?" It was generally believed Uncle Charley had a few dollars in the bank at Montague. He cashed a check here occasionally.

Garland thought he knew how this bank account had originated. It was, undoubtedly, founded on the $5,000 Ashforth Dale had paid for the section of land Thurlow had been negotiating with Uncle Charley to secure for his company. He decided, with his lawyer's instinct, to let Thurlow do some talking.

On The Remnant Counter

WITH THE CLERK

GET TOGETHER

THURSDAY was a day when newspaper men, particularly the country weekly newspaper men, kept to themselves. Oh, you the other fellow was all right and all that, but why bother with him. And, usually each was so allured concerned with his own opinions and the placing of them in his news columns that he had little time to mingle with other editors and learn what was going on about him.

As a result he failed to keep abreast with progress in his field. His show was the antithesis of closeness. His methods were an exaggeration of aloofness. And, at the end of the year he didn't have nearly as much money on hand as he thought he should have had.

But, that was in another day. Now the newspaper men, large and small, have banded together in various organizations. They spend a goodly portion of their time watching the conditions of their trade. They know the new ideas and the new methods. They have become better business men. They are on the watch to see that no one puts anything over on them.

We attended a meeting of one of these organizations Saturday. Most of the editors present were publishers of weekly newspapers, some of them published a couple of papers. They knew just about every method of putting across state legislation in their own behalf, discussed the cause and effect of advertising rates and contracts and their duties to their respective towns and villages. They rubbed shoulders and gleaned new ideas, extended a helping hand to each other.

The most interesting revelation of that meeting was that there are some 25 organizations represented at the state capital with a field manager or representative. Hotel shoe, retail merchandise, grocers, theater, newspaper, etc., groups have their own men on the job to protect their interests. Business in these days means cooperation and successful business means successful cooperation.

A BUILDER

DEATH in claiming John McGrath takes from the city one of its most interesting characters. His life was interwoven with the city's growth. It is only the man with great wealth and affluence, the man with power and property, whom we credit with building our cities. But, here is a man who had not those things and yet took an active part in making the city what it is today.

When this writer first came to Marion he went in search of feature stories. One of them concerned John McGrath and his days on the railroad about Marion. Mr. McGrath was connected with nearly all of the roads that were built into and about Marion decades ago. He knew intimately the struggles of those early days. To him fell the lot of operating one of the first steam shovels produced by the Marion Steam Shovel Co.

Of late years he was an integral part of the club house of the Marion Council of the Knights of Columbus. An custodian of the quarters he was known and loved by hundreds of men. And if once John McGrath met you you could be certain he always knew you.

PICTURES

It is the hope of this Remnant Counter to provide occasional news of the theater and the film. As good pictures or plays come to notice attention will be directed toward them. And, readers may rest assured that the facts will not be from the press agency.

For example, the six pictures that Max Tene selected as the best in April in the Chicago Tribune include: "Speedy," already seen here; "The Legion of the Condemned," "The Road to Nowhere," "The Enemy," and "Laugh Clown Laugh."

Of "The Enemy," now being shown here, she quotes from a previous review: "And now comes 'The Enemy' to put its influence on the side of the pathway of war. . . . Adapted from Channing Pollock's play, does not have war outlays as its subject, but the portrayal of life as the enemy, its argument that profiteering and not patriotism is, in the last analysis, the spirit behind the wars of nations, makes strong food for the thoughtful."

Again one sees gallant youth marching to death on bloody battlefields for "God and country." No many boys! No many countries! Only one God to whom all are praying for aid and vengeance! And, safe and snug at home, the profiteers—creating creations fabulous to their way of thinking. . . . That is what "The Enemy" is about. . . . A production you will not lightly forget.

For her description, and we show daily to the Marion Star, Mrs. Tene and Marion, their lives truly interesting and education points, on the counter, so we come in.
